Our Faculty

Creative Writing Faculty in the English Department

Eric G. Wilson (Director)
Thomas H. Pritchard Professor of English
CREATIVE NONFICTION

Amy Catanzano
Associate Professor of English
POETRY & CROSS-GENRE WRITING

Joanna Ruocco
Assistant Professor of English
FICTION & CROSS-GENRE WRITING

Eric Ekstrand
Assistant Teaching Professor
POETRY

Elisabeth Whitehead
Assistant Teaching Professor
POETRY

Contact Us

For more information about the Creative Writing minor including requirements, how to declare, how to pre-register for classes, course descriptions, co-curricular activities, and ways to be involved with the creative writing community at Wake Forest University, contact the minor’s director, Dr. Eric G. Wilson at wilsoneg@wfu.edu.

Creative Writing Minor
Department of English
Wake Forest University
C 201 Tribble Hall, Gulley Drive
Winston Salem, NC 27109
college.wfu.edu/english/minors/creative-writing/
Explore your creativity and imagination

The Creative Writing minor offers students the opportunity to write in multiple literary genres such as fiction, poetry, creative nonfiction, playwriting, and screenwriting. Students are provided with an exciting range of coursework, from fundamentals of craft to advanced explorations of forms, techniques, and theory. Creative writing courses are conducted in a unique workshop setting where students receive feedback from one another and the professor on their creative writing. Students conduct writing exercises and learn from a diverse range of literature. Creative writing courses are taught by our faculty of award-winning fiction writers, poets, and creative nonfiction writers. Our faculty are committed and innovative teachers as well as active and distinguished writers in their fields. The curriculum in creative writing courses is often linked to the English Department’s Dillon Johnston Writers Reading Series, which brings visiting writers for literary readings and class visits with students. Students have the opportunity to participate in The Salon, an afternoon reading series for students. This very popular venue fosters the literary community across the Wake Forest campus and offers a supportive space for students to share their creative work. Creative writing courses are open to minors and non-minors. Students who declare a Creative Writing minor receive first preference in enrolling in creative writing courses in the English Department during pre-registration periods. The Creative Writing minor complements all major fields of study. Some students in the minor go on to pursue graduate work in creative writing to write a first book, deepen their skills as writers, and prepare for careers in teaching, publishing, professional writing, and other fields that emphasize creativity and the literary arts. Faculty mentoring is provided to students who are interested in applying to these Master of Fine Arts programs in creative writing.

What are the requirements?
The Creative Writing Minor requires six courses (18 hours), including CRW 100* and one 300-level literature course offered by the English Department. The remaining four courses consist of creative writing workshops offered by the English Department (poetry, fiction, and creative nonfiction) or cross-listed with the minor (playwriting and screenwriting); at least two of these must be at the 300 level. No prior experience is needed. All students are welcome! English Majors may earn a Creative Writing Minor by taking five creative writing courses (at least two at the 300 level) exclusive of courses used to complete the major.

*Students who matriculated before fall 2018 are not required to take CRW 100. They can complete the minor with 15 credit hours.

What are some other benefits of creative writing?
In addition to developing the imagination, creative writing contributes to self and world knowledge. Literature can have a strong impact on social change. Classes are supportive, collaborative communities. Students acquire greater fluency in generating and editing their creative work, in textual analysis, and in working with language as an artistic practice. Try a class to discover more!