Field Lab I
This course focuses on school and society through practical experiences in public school classrooms and a weekly seminar (2h).

Professional Experiences in Education
This course offers selected students a placement in an educational setting under the supervision of a professional mentor. During this internship, students examine a critical topic in a local school, a community agency, a nonprofit organization or other educational setting (3h).

Writing Pedagogy
This course blends theory and practice, providing students from all content areas with a foundational understanding of writing pedagogy methods and approaches. Topics of study will include writing across the curriculum, writing research and assessment of writing (3h).

Teaching Diverse Learners
This course addresses diversity in the classroom, particularly the needs of English Language Learners and Exceptional Populations. It examines differentiated instruction with appropriate instructional and behavioral strategies to meet the needs of all students (3h).

Literacy in the 21st Century
This course examines the impact of emerging literacy trends on 21st century students in a digital, global world. There is specific focus on engaging reluctant and struggling readers (3h).

For information about the SES minor, contact Dr. Scott Baker (bakerrs@wfu.edu) in the Department of Education.
Master of Arts in Education

A 13-month program to earn a master’s degree and obtain a teaching license

Program Overview

Each year, a cohort of Master Teacher Fellows from across the country takes courses during the summer and fall semesters and completes a semester-long student teaching internship during the spring semester. Fellows complete the program by taking additional coursework the following June. Fellows focus on teacher leadership throughout the program and conduct an action research project that is published in the ERIC database.

WHAT GRADUATES SAY?

Wake Forest instilled in me the drive to search for new and better ways to teach by encouraging me to collaborate, communicate, and research with peers, professors, and experienced teachers.

-Kate Youngblood, ’14

Professors hold high expectations for students. The coursework was challenging and relevant, which prepared me for my student-teaching internship and my first teaching position. The educational policy courses stretched my thinking about public schooling and were a driving factor in my decision to pursue a career in educational administration.

-Boomer Kennedy, ’08

Program Features

- Individualized, personal attention from content area experts during teaching methodology courses and student teaching internship.
- Opportunities for students to attend or present with faculty at state, regional, and national conferences.
- Opportunities for students to conduct and co-author manuscripts with faculty for publication in journals.
- Annual Emerging Teacher Leaders Network conference for alumni in their first three years of teaching.
